About This Book

The Annual World Bank Conference on Development Economics (ABCDE) is a forum for discussion and debate of important policy issues facing developing countries. The conferences emphasize the contribution that empirical economic research can make to understanding development processes and to formulating sound development policies. Conference papers are written by researchers in and outside the World Bank. The conference series was started in 1989. Conference papers are reviewed by the editors and are also subject to internal and external peer review. Some papers were revised after the conference, to reflect the comments made by discussants or from the floor, while most discussants' comments were not revised. As a result, discussants' comments may refer to elements of the paper that no longer exist in their original form. Unless otherwise noted, participants' affiliations identified in this volume are as of the time of the conference, June 22–24, 2009.

The planning and organization of the June 2009 conference was a joint effort by the Government of the Republic of Korea, the Korea Development Institute (KDI), and the World Bank. We gratefully acknowledge timely and valuable contributions made by all the members of the Steering Committee and several anonymous reviewers.

We would also like to thank Alan Gelb and Aehyung Kim for their insightful advice and Leita Jones, conference organizer, whose excellent organizational skills helped to ensure a successful conference.

Finally, we thank the editorial staff from the World Bank's Office of the Publisher for their efforts in pulling this volume together.
